SKILLS

Independent Working: My degree frequently requires me to work independently. This year I had a couple of coursework in programming and digital systems modules. I worked on myself whilst ensuring I met the deadlines to a high standard.

Teamwork: Working on a group project taught me to work effectively within a team, listening to each other to benefit from everyone's knowledge. As the media executive for the French society, I worked within a committee of five members, facilitating advertising and communication.

Organisation: Throughout the year I managed attending both my outdoors activities (tennis, hockey, gym) and my lectures. To do so I implemented little study sessions regularly into my schedule in order to optimize my free time and spend more time with my friends.

Communication: 'Communication is key!' is a reminder I give everyone before every hockey match. Still to this day, I push myself to talk as much as possible on the pitch and encourage others to do so; It increases significantly the team cohesion.

Adaptability: I have demonstrated my ability to integrate in different cultures by playing a full role in the student life at Loughborough University. I am a member of many societies and played tennis, volleyball and dodgeball for my accommodation.
